

One Adventure too Many!!

Smith Family Newsletter May 2013 - Page 1

Well, the month of May turned out to be an interesting month for a couple of reasons. The first one was more than a little pleasant as it included a visit from our dear friends, Henry & Ann Goldman, who we lovingly consider family as well. They date back to the early days on the road, and continue to travel and work on the road. Upon arriving they pulled up and parked at our neighborhood Walmart. It was sooo good to see them again.

The pictures on the left show Henry & Ann with their motor home and Bandit in our local Walmart parking lot. The next picture down is of them visiting us at home, and the last picture is of a wonderful seafood dinner at Captain George's Restaurant before leaving town. We all got our money's worth there, you can be sure of it! Just look at those crab legs!!

Now to back up a little to April, for those who do not know, I had a diagnosis with stage 1 uterine cancer. This was of course an unexpected curve ball, to say the least. True to my nature, when I suspected something was wrong, I immediately went to my doctor to be checked out. She then referred me to the top surgeon in the area, Dr. Mathew Kohler. I did have to go to Charleston to the University Medical Center of SC. The surgery was on May 24th. It is the middle of June as I write this and am finally beginning to feel normal again. To be honest I am glad to be in the house instead of the motor home as this surgery was much more involved than my previous surgery. Once again, I feel I was blessed with how the stage was set and the care I received. My Bob had his hands full as we went through the process and was enormously supportive. He actually stayed with me at the hospital the whole time, sleeping in an uncomfortable chair in my room. The Charleston Hospital is a teaching hospital and the care was outstanding. On top of that, our neighbors Trish & Don looked after our house and cats without a second thought. It certainly has been an adventure.

We had bought an automatic cat feeder which turned out to be a good investment during this event. I have a couple of cute pictures down below showing them getting used to it. It was really funny to watch. Minnie is trying to figure out how to open it. Well, I think this is more than
